

The Information Resource Centre (GCIS Head Office) and the Department of Justice collaborated and undertook an outreach activation on the 16 Days of Activism for no violence against women and children. The essence of the event was to raise awareness about the negative impact of violence on women and children and to act against abuse. This is also the main function of the department of Justice in their quest to ensure a Just, Peaceful and Safe society.

The GCIS IRC extends special thanks to the Department of Justice for an excellent partnership in this event and other Departments such as SASSA, Department of Environmental Affairs, Department of Defence, Energy, PSETA, Arts & Culture and NPC for availing their material to be distributed in this event.

GCIS IRC Interacting with the public

Thuli Gaserotse GCIS Official distributing leaflets

Department of Justice and GCIS Working together for 16 Days of Activism

Citizens receiving material from the GCIS table

The public receiving publications and interacting with GCIS IRC Staff

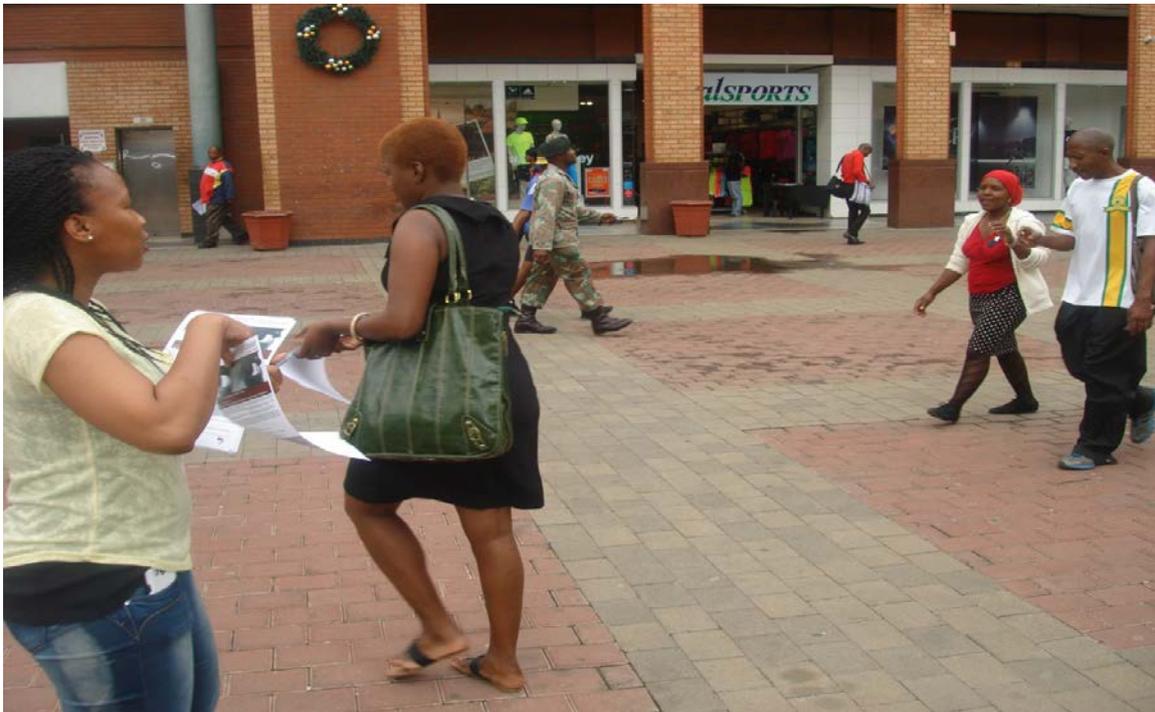

Reps from Department of Justice explaining the content of their material

Handing out publications and explaining its content

Thuli explaining the content of the South African year book

Thuli Gaserotse Handing out leaflets

Department of Justice interacting with the public

Public taking publications from our stands