FOREWORD BY THE MINISTER

In the year that we commemorate 25 Years of Freedom, there are many things to celebrate as South Africans. The successful conclusion of the nation's sixth democratic national and provincial elections has reaffirmed that our democracy remains strong.

The sight of millions of fellow South African's making their mark for democracy will live long in our collective memories. The elections and the subsequent inauguration of President Cyril Ramaphosa have ushered in an era of renewed hope.

Our New Dawn has well and truly arrived, and it will play a key role in shaping the work of the sixth democratic administration.

The President has now given marching orders to all government departments and entities. We are also confident that the reconfiguration of government departments will ensure a strong and capable state.

The announcement by the President on how government departments would be reconfigured to advance the drive for greater efficiency and effectiveness is a major development.

The changes have resulted in some departments being renamed, merged and others remaining separated by reporting to one Ministry. The reconfiguration process aims to ensure that departments are fit for purpose and sensitive to the austerity measures driving the programmes of this sixth administration.

This is indeed a period of great renewal and change that provides an opportunity to reflect on the progress we have made over our democratic journey and reinvigorate our efforts in moving our country forward.

As we celebrate 25 Years of Freedom, we can proudly declare that South Africa is a significantly different country from the one we inherited from the apartheid state in 1994. In a relatively short space of time, we have made strong inroads into transforming the lives of millions of South Africans.

While we still have much to do in reversing the entrenched legacy of apartheid's distorted policies, we have over the last 25 years put in place systems and programmes to keep our nation moving forward.

The strong communication system we have built ensures South Africans remain abreast of key developments that take place within the country. Our communication is helping citizens across the length and breadth of our nation to participate in, and enjoy the benefits of our hard-won democracy.

In the communication space we have created relevant platforms and products to share critical information on government services and programmes as well as create opportunities to open the economy to more South Africans.

As part of the Fourth Industrial Revolution (4IR), new technology brings together the physical and digital worlds. This will result in new avenues on how we communicate and interact with each other.

Digital platforms, social media and new communication technology will allow communication to come alive through interactive engagement, lively pictures and live videos.

The GCIS has embraced the move towards 4IR and is aligning to new technology developments to deliver government's messages to citizens in a creative and interactive manner. It includes the migration of more communication content to the government websites and social-media platforms.

We are determined to continue this forward momentum with the implementation of our 2019/20 Annual Performance Plan (APP) so citizens have the necessary tools to change their lives meaningfully.

Our plans remain bold and decisive to impact on the lives of South Africans. The APP makes the most of the department's limited financial resources that have been entrusted to us by the people of South Africa.

Through our various programmes, we seek to expand government's communication to enhance access to information that enables the public to participate in the country's transformation and in improving their own lives.

In using the power of communication we aim to bring more of our people into the productive sectors of the economy, help South Africans take advantage of the opportunities that arise from the 4IR and drive back the triple challenge of unemployment, poverty and inequality.

We are also committed to making the best use of our platforms and products to share information on government's key priorities such as employment, economic opportunities, youth programmes, service delivery and rural development.

The Constitution of the Republic of South Africa of 1996 mandates the department to inform the public of the work and programmes of government, and also requires that citizens be provided with information that is accurate, timely and proactive in order to empower and improve their lives.

Moreover, by ensuring citizens have access to timely information, and are informed about the policies and programmes of government, we advance our National Development Plan's (NDP) vision of building a cohesive and prosperous society by 2030.

In the coming period the GCIS will continue to provide strategic leadership and coordination to the government communication system. This includes strategic communication support in the planning and implementation of major government campaigns in each cluster. We will also ensure that annual communication plans for clusters are developed and implemented in collaboration with the respective departments.

The joint planning, sharing of resources and integration of efforts are essential in growing the reach of our communication efforts in an efficient and cost-effective manner. Our support includes conceptualising campaigns, developing communication strategies, content development, information dissemination and stakeholder engagement.

Some of the communication activities planned for the year include the various Operation Phakisa events, social-security communication, media tours to strategic projects, media and stakeholder roundtables, Southern African Development Community (SADC) and other international summits hosted in South Africa, and Imbizo Focus weeks.

The department will also continue with the implementation of its gender-based violence (GBV), anti-corruption, unemployment and professionalising the Public Service campaigns under the banner of Thuma Mina, as inspired by President Ramaphosa.

The GCIS is ready to take information directly to the doorsteps of our communities through development communication programmes, outreach campaigns and activations.

Our outreach programme encompasses community radio talk shows, taxi ranks and mall activations, and blitzes on commuter trains, and talk shows at local community radio and television (TV) stations.

The central and strategic role played by the GCIS in guiding the system-wide Imbizo Programme of Government will be heightened as these events have reached many South Africans in communities across the country.

To reach out to communities in the far-flung rural areas and ensure the voice of government emerges loud and clear, the GCIS will use its fortnightly government-owned flagship newspaper Vuk'uzenzele and weekly My District Today newsletter to disseminate information that empowers South Africans to participate in government programmes.

A key component of the APP is to strengthen our partnership with the media as a strategic stakeholder. In building this partnership, the GCIS will drive government's interaction and communication with the media. Our interaction has sustained communication from government to citizens on issues and decisions that affect them.

The department's in-house media bulk-buying service continues to save advertising costs for government while maintaining the visibility of government's communication campaigns. All approved media-buying campaigns will be implemented for various departments and public entities.

The department is strengthening support to community media and continues to encourage government departments to consider placement on this important platform when planning and budgeting for government campaigns.

As the department implements its 2019/20 APP, I am confident that it will build on the successes we have achieved over the last 25 years as a nation and provide South Africans with the necessary tools to meaningfully enjoy the benefits of our democracy.

Our New Dawn calls on everyone to play their part in building the nation of our collective dreams. Change or hope for a better future cannot be left to someone else. The future we want starts now and must be driven collectively.

ANNUAL PERFORMANCE PLAN

MEDIUM-TERM PERIOD
2019/20 - 2021/22

This brighter future we all yearn for will not happen automatically, and it certainly will not be easy to achieve. However, by working together we can ensure that we build a prosperous and united society.

The blueprint for the South Africa of the future is in our NDP, which speaks of a joint future where the talents and labours of all will be harnessed for the good of our nation.

Achieving this future requires the collective drive and commitment of all sectors of society. Our New Dawn has ushered in a new mood of confidence and optimism, and this is reflected in better consumer and business confidence. South Africans are also more confident about the future, and are hopeful that there will be meaningful and lasting change.

Our goal as South Africans should be to drive this change while ensuring that we strive for greater nation-building and social cohesion. Together we can build a strong society where South Africans are united in our diversity.

In the coming period, the GCIS stands ready to be at the forefront of this drive for change. We will use communication to inspire and instil hope, and will work tirelessly to transform the feeling of hope and renewal into a lasting movement for renewal and change.

Mr Jackson Mthembu, MP

Minister in The Presidency

FOREWORD BY THE DEPUTY MINISTER

The year 2019 has been an extremely busy and eventful one, especially for government communicators. It is the year in which South Africa successfully held its sixth democratic national and provincial elections. Our elections are an affirmation of the strength of our democracy; and the voices of millions of voters are a testament that South Africans take their hard-won right to vote very seriously.

As government we commend all who voted in the country's sixth democratic elections. This demonstration of active citizenship and patriotism displayed by countless South Africans was truly inspirational.

The successful conclusion of the elections has also ushered in the sixth administration. Following the elections, President Ramaphosa announced the appointment of a reconfigured national executive to make government more efficient. The changes have resulted in some departments being renamed, merged and others remaining separated by reporting to one Ministry.

As part of the reconfiguration process, the Government Communication and Information System (GCIS) now reports to the Minister in The Presidency. The President on the other hand has signed performance agreements with all Ministers and Deputy Ministers. This means that their performance will be evaluated regularly against clearly stated targets and clearly stated performance outcomes.

It is also a year during which South Africa will commemorate 25 Years of Freedom. The commemoration is an opportunity for all of us to reflect on progress we have made in delivering a better life for all. At the same time, we should put our heads together on how we intend overcoming the challenges we face and work towards building a united and prosperous country as envisaged in the NDP.

The elections, reconfiguration of government and commemoration of 25 Years of Freedom come just over a year since President Ramaphosa took over in 2018. He has since made significant progress in addressing a number of issues such as the slow growth of the economy, policy uncertainty and revitalising state-owned enterprises.

All of these developments are important and should be communicated to the people of this country so we can work together in the spirit of #ThumaMina. This is in line with our Constitution which requires that citizens be provided with information that is accurate and to ensure that they have access to government programmes and policies that benefit them.

media platforms covering different topics pertaining to key government programmes.

A variety of products and platforms such as Vuk'uzenzele, SAnews; My District Today newsletter and Public Sector Manager (PSM) magazine will also be used to disseminate information that empowers the general public.

Furthermore, regular post-Cabinet media briefings will be held to communicate the decisions of the Executive to the public.

More importantly, the GCIS will continue to play its central and guiding role between elected officials and the people they represent through the izimbizo programme. Izimbizo provide our people with an opportunity to engage officials on issues that affect them and provide inputs on how best to deal with them. These events are an important part of our commitment to take government to the people and they have had a significant impact on the lives of many South Africans in communities across the country.

The GCIS will also continue to provide support to clusters and departments such as conceptualising campaigns, developing communication strategies/plans, content development, information dissemination, stakeholder engagement, internal communication and coordinating government communications.

One of the main thrusts of the outreach programmes of the GCIS over the past year has been on economic opportunities and GBV, with a total of 331 such projects implemented with the relevant government structures, community-based organisations (CBOs) and the private sector. The department will continue to implement four campaigns namely GBV, Anti-Corruption, Unemployment and Professionalising the Public Service under the #ThumaMina theme.

This APP is our roadmap to ensure that relevant information reaches all South Africans and to remind them to play their part in moving our country forward.

Ms Thembi Siweya, MP

Deputy Minister in The Presidency

Date: 27 June 2019

The GCIS is tasked with the responsibility to inform the public of the work and programmes of government and the 2019/20 APP sets out the approach the GCIS will take for the year ahead. This APP builds on our constitutional mandate to ensure that the priorities of government are communicated effectively and comprehensively.

For the year ahead, the GCIS will continue to lead and drive government's interaction and communication with media. Communication of government messages will be enhanced through the placement of opinion pieces, media statements and daily government messaging in various print, broadcast and social-

INTRODUCTION BY THE ACTING DIRECTOR-GENERAL (ADG)

The communication space is forever changing. The days where communication could just simply respond are far gone; what is called for is a bold approach that drives our new narrative of hope and change.

The successful conclusion of the sixth National and Provincial Elections has ushered in the sixth democratic administration. With this administration now firmly in place, we are determined to ensure that communication plays a pivotal role in bringing about our New Dawn.

This 2019/20 APP firmly positions the GCIS to take the lead in our nation's robust and fast moving communication space. It allows us as the central communication organisation of government to help South Africans build the nation they seek.

Over the upcoming period we aim to enable South Africans to be involved in the implementation of government programmes. We also believe that well-informed citizens are better equipped to use information from government to improve their lives.

This is in line with fulfilling our constitutional mandate of empowering South Africans with the right information so they can benefit from our democracy and change their lives for the better.

Importantly, our communication approach has been tailored to speak to each and every South African in a language or medium they understand. It will be further refined to become even more targeted and focused to have the maximum impact.

The APP commits the department in the year ahead to be more responsive to the communication needs of our people by enhancing existing communication products and platforms, and where applicable introduce new ones.

It includes Vuk'uzenzele newspaper, which is published fortnightly partially in all 11 official languages and in Braille to meet the information needs of different target audiences. It is also being distributed free of charge in all provinces.

The government news agency SAnews; My District Today newsletter and PSM magazine will continue to ensure government information reaches the public.

The plan takes forward the GCIS's role in coordinating, guiding and advising on government communication. As a strategic communicator, the GCIS aims to go beyond informing the public about the work of government to building the reputation of the country, the economy and protecting the most vulnerable in society.

We will lead communication throughout government – at national, provincial and local level. In this regard, we will continue to rely on the support of government communicators across government and most importantly, our staff.

Our staff remain our greatest asset and we will continue to make the GCIS an employer of choice. At the same time, we will attract the best employees and empower staff with the tools they need to deliver on our constitutional mandate.

Our successes in building our human resource capacity includes the training of 25 middle managers on the Advanced Management Development Programme offered by the National School of Government.

Furthermore, a partnership was formed with the University of South Africa to ensure smooth implementation of a disability management programme and as a result of this initiative, 11 employees received free South African Sign Language basic training. The Employment Equity (EE) targets were met for people with disabilities at 2.04% and women at Senior Management Service (SMS) level at 50%. Targeted recruitment is continuously implemented and partnerships with organisations for people with disabilities are being strengthened to address this challenge.

The 2019/20 APP builds on the many successes the organisation has recorded in the last financial year. We will take forward our implementation of campaigns for change such as GBV, Anti-Corruption, Unemployment and Professionalising the Public Service.

These campaigns are part of our Thuma Mina Ops Room inspired by President Ramaphosa where as individuals, we make it our personal responsibility to confront our challenges and accelerate progress in building a prosperous society.

All South Africans as individuals, groups or communities must roll up their sleeves and work towards building a better future. This call links directly with the NDP's objective of "Building an Active Citizenry".

The NDP provides a long-term vision of a country we want to build by the year 2030 and it also highlights the importance of active citizenry for us to reach our desired destination.

This is a country where through our collective efforts we will eliminate the triple challenge of poverty, inequality and unemployment, and enable all South Africans to achieve a decent standard of living.

As a department we are committed to the prudent financial management of resources, which has resulted in yet another clean audit in the previous APP period. We will find innovative ways of doing more with less in response to the ever-decreasing budgets and cost-reducing measures implemented across government.

We are, however, cautious not to compromise the quality of the information that has to be produced and disseminated, especially given the expectations of our people.

Our work in the period ahead is premised on the need to do even more to build the nation of our collective dreams. We are determined to use this period of renewal to build on our nation's New Dawn.

In the year that we celebrate 25 Years of Freedom, we are aware that the work of government communication is key to unlocking the services, interventions, programmes and policies of government. As the hub of communication in our country, we aim to make a real and lasting change to the fortunes of our nation and the functioning of government.

4. LEGISLATIVE AND CONSTITUTIONAL MANDATE

4.1 Constitutional mandate

Section 195(g) of the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa of 1996 forms the basis of the formation of the GCIS, where it stipulates that in order to foster transparency the public should be provided with information that is timely, accurate and importantly, accessible.

In 1998, the South African Communication Service was dissolved and the GCIS established by Cabinet, largely on the basis of recommendations contained in the report of the Task Group on Government Communications (Comtask: 1996: 58).

Government's mandate requires that its communication be expanded to enhance access to information that enables the public to participate in the country's transformation and in bettering their own lives; that it should bring the realities of

It will provide leadership in the development of effective departmental and provincial communication strategies that are aligned to the NCSF. The GCIS will also develop a five-year core message for the communication of key government programmes and monitor the implementation of the Government Communication Policy across the three spheres of government.

The department will use research to ensure that communication is targeted, responsive and relevant to the information needs of the people. It will develop and effectively use communication products and services to better meet government's and the public's information needs. The GCIS will also promote a participatory democracy.

Proactive and Reactive Media and Public Engagement System

The GCIS leads and drives government's interaction and communication with the media. Our interaction has sustained communication from government to citizens on issues and decisions that affect them. Communication of government messages is enhanced through the placement of opinion pieces, media statements and daily government messaging in various print, broadcast and social-media platforms covering different topics pertaining to key government programmes.

A total of 17 post-Cabinet media briefings will be held over the MTEF period to communicate the decisions of the Executive to the public. The department also plays a catalytic role in engaging with the media and plans to hold 16 engagements with the media during the period covered in the APP. The daily Rapid Response meetings will be held to assess the media environment and produce recommendations for either a proactive or reactive communication response. A total of 24 biweekly Rapid Response reports will be developed to inform management about developments in the media environment.

Facilitating active citizen participation

Despite an ever-decreasing resource base, the GCIS has made significant strides in implementing development communication in the past year, with firm plans to enhance this service in the year ahead. Solid progress has also been made in maintaining and strengthening a well-functioning communication system that is a backbone of driving this information programme. Some 1 710 community and stakeholder liaison visits will be held to foster sound stakeholder relationships and partnerships.

Through direct and unmediated communication engagements in the past financial year, over 53 million people were reached with government messages (some being repeat audiences). The department has planned 1 140 development communication each year over the MTEF period. A total of 3 102 outreach campaigns are planned, using mediums like taxi rank and mall activations, and blitzes on commuter trains in partnership with the Passenger Rail Agency of South Africa; talk shows at local community radio and TV stations; open days, especially at Thusong Service Centres, dialogues, door-to-door/household visits, and project walkabouts and inspections.

One of the main thrusts of the outreach programmes of the GCIS over the past year has been on economic opportunities and GBV, with a total of 331 such projects implemented with the relevant government structures, CBOs and the private sector. The department will continue to implement four communication campaigns (GBV, Anti-Corruption, Unemployment and Professionalising the Public Service) under the Thuma Mina theme.

A major positive development this past year has been the continued central and strategic role played by the GCIS in guiding the system-wide Imbizo Programme of Government. By and large, these events have reached many South Africans in communities across the country. There has been a noteworthy improvement in reaching provinces under-visited in previous reports, including the Northern Cape and Eastern Cape. The GCIS alone, particularly through its provincial and district offices, was able to assist national, provincial and local government Principals.

This achievement bears strong witness to the type of government we have in South Africa – one where accountability and direct communication with citizens is at the core of how government operates. This ensures that we continue to build a caring society where issues raised through such direct engagements are addressed and responded to, and government is immediate, accessible and transparent.

Although there are challenges of inadequate information flow as well as synchronicity in how different spheres cooperate in addressing service-delivery gaps, the Izimbizo Programme of Government and the subsequent intensified outreach by Ministers and other leaders on various programmes of government continue to be the preferred platforms for face-to-face engagements.

The GCIS has sustained and enhanced critical direct communication platforms, particularly through its provincial and district offices, and will publish 45 weekly Friday afternoon editions of My District Today to give expression to development communication by profiling government interventions and their socio-economic impact on ordinary citizens as beneficiaries of government programmes.

This promotes a citizenry-centred and participatory element of government interventions. Sentiments of beneficiaries about government's programmes and services are the content focus for My District Today. As such, it continued to share local good news stories and information about government at work in the furthest corners of South Africa.

My District Today now reaches approximately 13 500 users from local and district municipalities, Thusong Service Centres, local communicators, community development workers, provincial and district forums, civil society, business formations, government departments, the Parliamentary Office and constituencies, and is also available on the GCIS website www.gcis.gov.za.

Produce government's communication products and services

The GCIS will continue to disseminate information that empowers the general public to participate in government programmes through Vuk'uzenzele – the fortnightly government-owned newspaper that is distributed for free, mainly in areas with less access to the mainstream media – and the daily radio news broadcasts that are freely available to community media. The department will build on the success over the past financial year where Vuk'uzenzele raised R2.607 million through advertising revenue, which was used to print an additional 2.646 million copies. Overall, the GCIS distributed 23 500 000 copies of the newspaper and 13 200 copies of Braille during the 2017/18 financial year.

Various government departments benefitted from the GCIS's services such as the drafting of communication strategies, media engagement services and key messages. During the 2017/18 financial year, the GCIS produced 185 sets of key messages on a range of topics, events and key government campaigns and priorities. They also produced 76 opinion pieces on key government campaigns and initiatives, including issues in the media environment that required amplification and clarification. Furthermore, the GCIS will continue to provide the media-monitoring reports three times a day on national and international print, broadcast and online media. This will be further supplemented by daily (workdays) SMS News Highlights which capture the top news stories of the day from national and international media.

Another very successful intervention has been the GCIS's in-house media bulk-buying service which since its launch has saved advertising costs for government while maintaining the visibility of government's communication campaigns. About 40% of approved media-buying campaigns will be implemented for various departments and public entities. The department is strengthening support to community media and continues to encourage government departments to consider placement on this important platform when planning and budgeting for government campaigns. Some 240 radio products and services will be provided over the MTEF period.

Advancing towards the 4IR

The GCIS is already sharing an array of content on the online platforms. It envisions the greater use of digital platforms in its work when compared to the traditional print format. GCIS products such as the South Africa Yearbook (SAYB), Vuk'uzenzele newspaper and PSM magazine are finding a greater presence online. The SAYB and Official Guide to South Africa (formerly Pocket Guide to South Africa) will be digitised to ensure that they become the premium reference source for government information. To further ensure that it is available on all online platforms in an e-book format.

The GCIS is using technology to reach more South Africans through the government App. The App gives users quick access to government leaders, events, speeches and other government information. It functions alongside the Vuk'uzenzele newspaper App which allows users to download and read the government newspaper that is distributed nationwide. It effectively extends the reach of the newspaper beyond the printed copy to mobile users.

The GCIS is embracing technology driven communication mediums that connect it directly to South Africans. It is evident in the greater use of social-media platforms such as Facebook, Twitter and Instagram. GCIS units that deliver content and communicate with South Africans have a strong social media presence. These mediums also allow provincial activities to be witnessed instantaneously countrywide.

In the fast moving information space, the GCIS plans to use technology that allows the quick transmission of government footage. This includes using camera technology for both video and photography that has built in Wi-Fi to allow photographers to post photographs directly from their cameras to social media and websites. Videographers are currently using a long and time-consuming route to send and upload footage. Therefore, they also require network-enabled cameras to be able to stream live and send material to the media.

The instantaneous provision of footage and photos will allow for immediate reuse by media houses both locally and internationally. We anticipate that the technology will result in a convergence of functions for GCIS broadcast and photo journalists. Moreover, in giving South Africans a unique view of government events and a sense of occasion, the GCIS will use drones to capture footage of larger events. In order to be ready for this, we are in the process of training staff for their drone pilot licences.

The department also plans to install a virtual TV studio which will allow for seamless real-time TV production in a computer-generated environment. A virtual studio does not need any post production. The GCIS is exploring the feasibility of equipping its current TV studio into a fully operational virtual studio.

The introduction of web-streaming software will allow the GCIS to stream more government content on its website. The real-time availability of government events as it unfolds will allow South Africans to be part of discussions and engage with the content. The GCIS also plans to incorporate web streaming ability into its radio studios. This will require an upgrade to the Integrated Services Digital Network telephone line in the radio studio to increase its bandwidth and the installation of a vision mixer to allow multiple camera feeds.

The GCIS leads and drives interaction and communication between government and the media on various campaigns and key issues via Skype and a video link-up facility that can be connected to all provinces for media engagements.

Select Thusong Service Centres will be used as digital hubs for the public to access government information. Teleconferences and WhatsApp Messenger will be used to communicate with various stakeholders.

Going forward, SANews will shift to more digital content with a greater focus on video and photos while publishing written articles. Feature pieces will in future be done together with video. The unit will also focus on web streaming media briefings, more information graphics and interactive digital tools. The organisation will introduce steady cam technology for cellphones with news service capabilities.

The move towards 4IR has wide-ranging implications for South Africans, and there is a need for a comprehensive education and awareness programme. The GCIS will drive a strong content narrative on the benefits of 4IR through mass campaigns over an extended period of time to educate and inform citizens.

5.2 Organisational Environment

The GCIS has been allocated R441.7 million in 2019/20, R471.4 million in 2020/21 and R500.3 million in 2021/22. Compensation of employees comprises on average 62% of the budget over the medium term. A total of 63% of the department's allocation over the medium term is spent in the Programme: Content Processing and Dissemination as well as the Programme: Intergovernmental Coordination and Stakeholder Management, and 37% in the Programme: Administration. The department's funded establishment is expected to be 464 permanent posts. Spending on goods and services over the medium term is expected to be primarily on operating leases, travel and subsistence and operating expenses relating to the publication and distribution of the monthly Vuk'uzenzele newspaper. The department will focus over the medium term on coordinating and professionalising government communication and making it as cost-effective as possible.

The department had a vacancy rate of 8.99%, which is still lower than the prescribed 10% of the Department of Public Service and Administration (DPSA). However, the positions for DG, two Deputy DGs (DDGs) and Chief Director: Communication Service Agency (CSA) remain vacant.

The EE targets were met for people with disabilities at 2.56% and women at SMS level at 50%. The department is under-represented in other ethnic groups for Indians, whites and coloureds. Targeted recruitment is continuously implemented and partnerships with organisations for people with disabilities are strengthened to address this challenge.

The 2017/18 unaudited Annual Financial Statements (AFS) were submitted to National Treasury and the Auditor-General of South Africa (AGSA) not later than the legislated date of 31 May 2018, for which the AGSA issued yet another clean-audit report for the 2017/18 financial year. The procurement and demand plans for the department were developed and submitted timeously to National Treasury. In addition, the sourcing strategy was developed for goods and services. The procurement of goods and services was rendered successfully, including facilitating media-buying transactions on behalf of government client departments and entities.

Improving internal processes in advancing to 4IR

The GCIS plans to tap into the benefits of cloud-based solutions. Accessing cloud computing will allow the organisation to run applications on the Internet rather than software downloaded on a physical computer or server. It enables quicker access to applications to remote resources and hardware failures will not result in data loss.

The department will build capacity on Business Intelligence Reporting and Data Analytics, and create a repository for reports on SharePoint to support organisational decision-making. IT infrastructure will be upgraded to improve systems performance to handle more data and automation of business processes. Skype for business will be implemented over the medium term for virtual meetings and reduce the cost of travel and subsistence for GCIS.

The GCIS has automated some of the business processes, which is e-Leave, eRequisition for procurement, performance contracting and assessment and an electronic organisational performance reporting system to track achievements of targets set in the APPs.

The GCIS will procure a software that will assist in workforce planning, tracking performance and managing leave liability against leave provision. It will also introduce an online sourcing of human capital through e-Recruitment, and automate the training request and approval process. In addition, the Audit Risk Software is used to automate data analysis and increase audit efficiency.

In light of the technological advancement and the acceleration of the 4IR, employees will require new skills to keep up with the changes. The GCIS will upskill staff and further ensure they are multi-skilled to use different communication platforms or approaches to enhance communication outputs.

The operational budget baseline allocation in the Programme: Content Processing and Dissemination is directed to conduct research, monitor media coverage of government programmes and develop content for departmental communication products such as Vuk'uzenzele newspaper, PSM magazine, articles for SANews.gov.za, websites, the SAYB and the Official Guide to South Africa, multilingual translations as well as social media and to provide leadership in the development and production of communication services. The gradual increase over the medium term is mainly due to inflation adjustment.

7.3 Programme 3: Intergovernmental Coordination and Stakeholder Management

Programme purpose	Implementation of development communication, through mediated and unmediated communication and sound stakeholder relations and partnerships.
Strategic goal 3	Maintain and strengthen a well-functioning communication system that proactively informs and engages the public.
Strategic objectives	3.1 Implement a proactive and reactive media and public engagement system by building, maintaining and improving relations with the media and drive the government communication agenda.
	3.2 Proactively provide strategic communication leadership on government programmes and content across the three spheres of government.
	3.3 An informed and empowered citizenry on government's policies, plans, programmes and achievements to increase public participation in government.

The programme's functions are organised into the following subprogrammes:

- Media Engagement leads and drives interaction and communication between government and the media. Funding in this subprogramme will be used to ensure effective liaison between Ministers and the media; manage ongoing media liaison services to government by providing government information; establishing, strengthening and maintaining working relationships with foreign media and independent media; and establishing relations with South African missions and parliamentary stakeholders with the view of disseminating government information and key targeted messages.
- Cluster Communication provides strategic communication, planning, coordination and support to clusters. It provides leadership and professional project management services for cluster communication campaigns.
- Provincial and Local Liaison (PLL) ensures that the NCSF is presented to the provinces for alignment. Funding will be used to procure various media channels, HR capacity, platforms and materials to promote government messages to the public at local levels. The subprogramme is also responsible for promoting the Thusong Service Centres to the public, as well as ensuring that government departments send different print products and materials to these centres. The subprogramme also coordinates the Izimbizo programme of government.
