FOREWORD BY THE MINISTRY

President Jacob Zuma describes the defining feature of his administration as one that “knows where the people live, understands their needs and responds faster” to deal with the concerns of all South Africans. To achieve this President Zuma urged government to “work faster, harder and smarter”.

This call reinforces our long-term objective of creating a national democratic society where we all live united in our diversity. To assist government in achieving this objective GCIS has restructured and rebranded itself into “the Pulse of Communication Excellence in Government.” This Vision underpins GCIS’s primary role to provide strategic leadership in government communication and to ensure that the public is informed about government’s policies, plans and programmes.

Through providing leadership to the government-wide communications system GCIS provides a platform for critically needed communications and, perhaps more importantly, enables this Government to coordinate our efforts to communicate more directly and effectively with our citizens. To this end, GCIS is constantly seeking avenues that will contribute towards heeding the Presidential call for government to work faster and smarter.

Last year, we committed that GCIS would take political principals and key figures in our administration directly into people’s homes, into corporate boardrooms and into other stakeholder forums as part of ensuring that government shares its programmes directly and listens to its citizens. In pursuit of this objective, GCIS supported, through various communication platforms, the Siyahlola Presidential Monitoring programme visits, the War on Poverty visits of the Deputy President as well as public participation programme (PPP) of the Ministers. GCIS successfully tackled this challenge, and delivered extremely well, although much still needs to be done. We therefore commit to scaling up in the 2013/14 financial year, coupled with repeat and follow up visits.

As a function of good governance, open and proactive communication ensures that the public receive government information, and that the views and concerns of the public are taken into account in the planning, implementation and evaluation of government delivery programmes and policies.

In our fight against the triple challenge of unemployment, poverty and inequality, it is as important for government to create tangible, practical opportunities for a better life as it is to let people know, in the first place, that these opportunities exist. For this reason, President Zuma instructed us earlier this year to work towards opening the space for more black South Africans and in particular more women to participate in the economy. As GCIS we will ensure that our citizens, including women, have access to information which they can use to access the opportunities that are available to them.

The infrastructure development plan has introduced the national and central coordination of the building of dams, roads, bridges, power stations, schools, hospitals, two new universities and other infrastructure that will change the landscape of our country and the lives of our people. Part of securing the success of this programme is dependent on GCIS being at the forefront of driving communications about these plans.

But beyond the objective of communicating government's plans GCIS will provide, in partnership with other stakeholders including provincial and local government, an opportunity for citizens to discuss and feedback to political leaders and citizens the final decision. Interactive and proactive government is about efficient communications.

GCIS is committed to maximising their communications efforts in order to reach the entire South African population. We are equally committed to ensuring that people's access to information and interactive communications play the role of a primary enabler to stimulate economic growth and job creation.

Over the coming years, GCIS will – in line with its vision of being “the Pulse of Communication Excellence in Government” - energise the nation around our development goals and help to maintain the confidence of investors and partners both locally and internationally.

The forthcoming milestones of 20 Years of Democracy, the fifth democratic general election and the Millennium Development Goals are among landmarks that will arise during this strategic period. These are all exciting, communication-intensive milestones with GCIS playing its requisite leadership role.

GCIS is, furthermore, dutybound to provide strong communication support to the National Planning Commission in asserting and popularising the National Development Plan as the official blueprint for South Africa's development between now and 2030, following extensive consultation between government and various sectors of the economy and society.

The National Development Plan lends itself to stirring the soul and imagination of all South Africans in pursuit of a future that will bear the outcomes of the nation's struggle against the triple challenge of poverty, unemployment and inequality. Innovation in communication with a broad range of stakeholders inside and outside the country is required to unite South Africans in action for the implementation of the Plan, and to demonstrate internationally our progressive march towards 2030.

In conclusion, I am a firm believer that communicating government's successes and challenges must not be seen as an obstacle, but as an opportunity for South Africans to interact with their government. This is what a democratic government does: we listen, we discuss. And, together, we act in the best interest of our country, shaping our own future together.

A MESSAGE BY THE ACTING CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Communications represent an important function of government. The South African Government's developmental agenda and the need to constantly focus public opinion and sentiment on the progress the country is making in creating a better life for all, creates a clear demand for a proactive, agile and well-coordinated communications programme.

GCIS' outlook as formulated in this three-year plan is shaped by its ten year review, the information needs of the citizens and is within the political milieu of this current administration. In 2011, GCIS also repositioned itself as the "pulse of communication excellence in government". GCIS is therefore very optimistic about the success of its plans for the years ahead.

In January 2011 President Jacob Zuma identified communications as a "primary task" for his administration. GCIS has not only heeded this call through its review of the National Communication Strategy which was approved by Cabinet in June 2011; but has sustained it by implementing interactive and face-to-face communication programmes that seek to reach all citizens of South Africa.

The objective of this programme is to communicate Government's vision and articulate the country's international relations objectives, while contributing to national unity and social cohesion. This programme should also serve to mobilise all sectors of society to work together – in the context of Government's central theme – to improve conditions in the country.

Furthermore, it should fundamentally place Government communication on a proactive, energetic footing, alongside the agility to rapidly respond to issues in a severely contested communication environment both domestically and internationally.

During the period covered by this annual performance plan, over the MTEF period 2013/16, Government's interest in improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the state in order to improve service delivery and the lives of our people, will be driven by a well-coordinated and vibrant communications system. In September 2011, the National Planning Commission released the draft country's 20 year National Development Plan and the vision; which seeks to eliminate unemployment, poverty and reduce inequality by 2030. The plan was adopted when it was presented to the President and Parliament in August 2012. The responsibility is now on the entire machinery of government to come together to implement the plan, to better the lives of all citizens.

With this in mind, GCIS will during this political term place special emphasis on the development communication approach to ensure that the Government-wide communication system disseminates information in line with the developmental agenda of the country.

Our rapid response team will ensure that government responds to issues with the necessary haste to ensure that citizens are kept abreast of major developments. To this end, GCIS in partnership with Palama will strive to improve the skills of government communicators through the introduction of an accredited certificate in government communications.

Empowering communicators through training and development programmes will contribute significantly towards government better communicating its objective of creating a better life for people where they live.

Since bringing media bulk buying in-house, GCIS has seen growth in government departments utilising this service. The media bulk buying service of GCIS is designed to save government money, whilst maintaining the visibility of government's work through bulk media buying. In 2013/14 GCIS has planned to scale this up so government can save more.

At GCIS we view communications as more than the provision of information. Government communications is about strengthening and consolidating our democracy.

Honesty and integrity build a foundation for trust.</li></ul>

4. LEGISLATIVE AND CONSTITUTIONAL MANDATES

4.1. Constitutional Mandate

Section 195 (g) of the Constitution of South Africa, 1996, is the basis of the formation of the GCIS where it stipulates that in order to foster transparency, the public should be provided with information that is timely, accurate and accessible.

In the execution of its functions and in line with its founding legislation, GCIS complies with the following specific sections of the Constitution:

- Section 41: cooperative governance values
- Section 195: basic values and principles governing public administration
- Section 231: international agreements.

In 1998, the South African Communication Service was dissolved and the Government Communication and Information System (GCIS) established by Cabinet, largely on the basis of recommendations contained in the report of the Task Group on Government Communications (Comtask, 1996: 58).

4.2. Legislative Mandate

Government Communications (GCIS) is primarily responsible for providing strategic leadership and coordinating government communications to ensure that the public is informed and have access to government programmes and policies that benefit them.

Through the development and implementation of the government communication strategy (GCS), GCIS continues to ensure that the mandate of government is communicated to the South African population, using different platforms and products.

The GCIS Strategic Plan is further informed by the above-stated mandate, as well as various relevant legislative mandates and related government policies and directives, which include among others:

4.3 The Public Finance Management Act (PFMA) 1999, (Act 1 of 1999 as amended)

4.4 The National Treasury Framework on Developing Strategic Plans and Annual Performance Plans; August 2010

4.5 The Medium Term Strategic Framework (MTSF) 2009 – 2014.

5. UPDATED SITUATIONAL ANALYSIS

5.1. Service Delivery Environment

Capacity or resource constraints (human and financial) limit the implementation of the strategic and annual performance plans. Owing to the anticipated budget cuts over the 2013/16 Medium Term Expenditure Framework (MTEF), GCIS has had to revisit its planned targets and initiatives and adjust them in line with available resources. GCIS would, however, try to do more with less. High demand for media bulk buying exerts a lot of pressure to the supply-chain function and more resources are required in this regard.

The department has continued to provide leadership in coordinating a government-wide communication system by supporting communication campaigns across government and focusing especially on the five priorities. Presentations to cascade government content were done to the national, provincial and local government spheres, resulting in further review and development of communication strategies that are aligned to the National Communication Strategy (NCS). Owing to high demand for publications, a total of 905 608 government communication materials were distributed through a post-SoNA (State of the Nation Address) seminar, provincial budget vote and SoNA activations. The department has further coordinated 88 Siyahlola and Izimbizo events of the President, Deputy President, minister and Deputy minister.

27 media engagements were coordinated, profiling Cabinet discussions and decisions. In addition, seven Cabinet briefings and 20 statements were released related to the Marikana tragedy, Olympics and Paralympics, election of Dr Dlamini-Zuma, the crime statistics, the launch of the Annual National Assessments, etc.

The department has continually provided language services to other government departments with an increased number of requests coming in. During 2012/13, GCIS experienced increased demand for media bulk buying.

An academic symposium was held on 10 to 11 September 2012 with representatives from academic institutions in partnership with Palama to secure buy-in for a recognised credit-bearing qualification. The terms of reference for the development of an accredited short-term training programme for government communicators were signed off with Palama and a service provider appointed to design the course.

GCIS has received an unqualified audit report for the period 2011-12. In keeping with good corporate governance, GCIS reviewed its procurement policy and met all its legislated obligations.

5.2. Organisational Environment

During the first half of the 2012/13 financial year, the organisation went through various changes in the structure, which included the following:

- The ending of GCIS CEO Mr Jimmy Manyi's contract on 25 August 2012 and the appointment of Ms Phumla Williams as the Acting CEO from 26 August 2012.
- Mr Keitumetse Semakane, Chief Director: Human Resource Management, was subsequently appointed as Acting DCEO: Corporate Services.
- The Deputy CEO: Content and Communication Management, Mr Vusi Mona resigned in January 2013 and the post was re-advertised.
- The Chief Directorate: Training and Development has been transferred from Programme 2 to Programme 1. Subsequently, the Directorate: Human Resource Development was to the Chief Directorate: Training and Development.

GCIS is looking forward to moving into its new headquarter premises in May 2013. The construction of the new building is progressing well and the structural frame had reached fifth-floor level by December 2012, which is 69% complete. The corporate services branch will conduct a climate and feasibility studies soon after the relocation. The feasibility study is meant to commence a process to purchase the building.

5.3. Organisational structure

The GCIS has a staff complement of 459 employees out of a total establishment of 479. The GCIS' mandate is to continuously communicate with and inform the public on the policies and programmes of government to improve their lives. In carrying out this mandate, the GCIS has to provide strategic leadership in government communication. This calls for a workforce with excellent strategic and communication skills and capabilities.

The GCIS has a number of human resources (HR) policies that took its cue from the broader policy framework provided by the Department of Public Service and Administration (DPSA). Some of these policies were reviewed so that they adequately respond to the strategic objectives of the organisation or the environment within which the GCIS operates.

The delivery imperatives of the GCIS have resulted in the review of the structure by re-aligning some of its functions and renaming some programmes to reflect their core mandates. Each programme has a number of sub-programmes, namely:

PROGRAMME 1: Administration

Sub-programme 1.1: Departmental Management

Sub-programme 1.2: Human Resources

Sub-programme 1.3: Financial Administration

Sub-programme 1.4: Internal Audit

Sub-programme 1.5: Office Accommodation

Sub-programme 1.6: Strategic Planning and Programme Management.

Relating expenditure trends to strategic outcomes-oriented goal

The budget over the MTEFF period will be spent on the following:

- Implementation of the National Communication Strategy
- Operating leases and personnel
- Media bulk buying and media production
- Stakeholder and media engagement
- Development communication

Strategic outcome-oriented goals of the institution

The department has only one strategic outcome-oriented goal in support of government outcome 12.

Strategic outcome-oriented goal	Coherent, responsive and cost-effective communication services for all government programmes.
Goal statement	To provide strategic leadership in government communication and coordinate a government communication system that ensures the public is informed of government programmes and policies.

The GCIS, a transversal strategic communication organisation, provides communication support to implement government's 12 outcomes. It directly contributes to the implementation of outcome 12.

Outcome 12: An efficient, effective and development-oriented public service and empowered, fair and inclusive citizenship.

Outcome 12B: An empowered, fair and inclusive citizenship. The department will contribute to the output by ensuring that the government-wide communication system disseminates information on programmes and services that will improve people's lives. The following programme indicators will measure the progress over the five-year period:

Output 1 Sub-output 2: Access to government service

In the period covered in the strategic plan, the department will increase and strengthen the communication platforms.

GCIS link to outcome 12:

- The number of marketing events per Thusong Service Centre
- Number of copies of Vuk'uzenzele published
- Number of media briefings held
- Number of community and stakeholder liaison visits.
