

Government Exhibition Day 2015

By William Phalane: GCIS, Head Office

The GCIS with other 29 government departments, state-owned entities and NGOs attended the first Government Exhibition Day on 30 October 2015 at the Mamelodi Thusong Centre. The objective was to disseminate government information products as part of the development communication initiative and to offer a one-stop service to members of the public residing within the Mamelodi area.

The exhibition was led by the GCIS DDGs Mr Harold Maloka and Ms Nebo Legoabe, who were part of the team disseminating government information to the community. Mamelodi residents appreciated the fact that Government brought services closer to them. The outreach was characterised by its interactive nature where departments presented the services using microphones and answering questions asked by members of the public. The day was concluded with great success following a high turn-up of citizens and government departments who exhibited on the day.

Pictorial:

DDG Mr Harold Maloka interacts with Mamelodi citizens, taking and responding to queries while handing out information material. On the other hand Ms Zuki Mapete and Mr George Moeketsi were distributing freebies like shopper bags, etc.

GCIS officials Ms Thulaganyo Gaserotse and Ms Brenda Nkuna proudly distributing information material and interacting with community members.

Citizens queuing for information material and government publications

Mr Willy Phalane is roaming around taking and answering queries as well as directing people to other exhibitors and in-house services offered at the Centre.

DDG Ms Nebo Legoabe is taking a closer look at a zero emission electric vehicle or green car from Environmental Affairs: the car is fully powered by solar energy.

Other exhibitors including Tshwane Metro Police Services and South African Police Service were also encouraging citizens to always obey the rules of the road when driving or walking